

Time to live your dream

Every day should start with a little luxury and there's no better place to indulge oneself than in the privacy of a gleaming bathroom.

Sue and James Boyer always planned to stay put in the much-loved family home they built in the '70s. But the time came when the bathrooms - fabulous in their day - needed some serious updating.

Sue also dreamt of other changes which were out of reach when the couple raised a family but when their offspring flew the coop, the time was right to bring those ideas to fruition.

While looking for inspiration at a local building supplier, a retail assistant introduced the Boyers to Mark Higson from The Trade Team. She told them he was the man for their job.

Sue says she already had a quote from a reputable company but Mark's attitude impressed.

"He had great integrity and listened to our ideas," she says. "He didn't jump in and say 'do this or that' he listened and quietly suggested things."

With renovations and alterations, his forte, Mark's fastidious approach throughout the project ensures living areas were respected, kept clean and the impact of work, minimised.

"Mark is also a local." Sue says. "He knows housing in the area and also has a team of highly-skilled, specialised workers. We never had to question his workmanship."

Despite limited space, the Boyers wanted a touch of luxury within a realistic budget. With clever planning, Mark managed to fit a shower in a small bathroom and transformed the laundry into a multi-purpose room.

Tackling one room at a time, The Trade Team injected that sought-after pizzazz with contemporary tiles, cabinets and fittings including a bath, essential for when grandchildren come to stay.

Mark worked closely with the Boyers ensuring they chose fittings with a five-year warranty and that were compatible with the water supply pressure.

Mark also ensured all workmanship complied with current building codes.

With bathroom and laundry renovation completed, Sue had another project in mind. She had often dreamt of looking out to the garden through large open doors and decided to ask Mark to take care of the project.

"We love our house and the location and Mark has helped me live my dreams. Who wouldn't have him back?" says Sue.

If you too want a little extra luxury call The Trade Team and let them create your perfect place.
